

CAR 110: INTRODUCTION TO CARIBBEAN STUDIES

Caribbean Studies is an interdisciplinary subject that provides students with the opportunity to study issues relevant to the distinctive physical, political and socio-economic challenges facing the small territories/states/countries which comprise the region. This course will attempt to define the Caribbean region in terms of its geography, common historical experiences, participation in the global community, intermixing of diverse ethnic and racial groups, and its continuing struggle for survival and sovereignty.

Persons who successfully complete this course will have developed an appreciation of the challenges and potential of being Caribbean citizens. They will understand their roles and responsibilities in preserving and contributing to their Caribbean heritage and the importance of regional co-operation for the development of the Caribbean.

Pre-requisite(s): ENG 111

3 credits

BIO 100: INTRODUCTION TO BIOLOGY

The course will be an introduction to and review of the underlying concepts common to all of the natural sciences, with emphasis on basic biological principals and concepts. The learning objectives are to produce a student who:

- a) is scientifically literate, capable of critical and independent thought
- b) has the ability to apply the general concepts and principles of Biology, Ecology and Biochemistry to everyday situations
- c) has a basic understanding of environmental science
- d) has a basic understanding of genetics and cell reproduction
- e) has a basic understanding evolution and population biology

Pre-requisite(s): MAT 022 or a satisfactory score on the placement test. Co-requisite: MAT 141
4 credits